Cerberus FTP Server is a professional file and FTP server app that packs a lot of useful features that can be found in only a handful of programs. The app's name is suggestive of its many options and customizability potential. Manage working directories, users and permissions from one place The program comes with several "panes" that organize all the needed options and settings in a convenient layout. We suggest using the "Advanced Users" pane to first create a user profile and then set the server-specific options, such as IP whitelisting, connection limit and timeout, and the volume of statistics to monitor. The "Protocols" pane comes handy in case you would prefer to transfer data via FTP, SFTP, FTPS, SCP or any of the supported versions of HTTP. The "Administration" pane can be used to create a server or re-configure one that already exists. You can make use of Active Directory integration to manage the accounts, their permissions, user groups, SSL certificates and directory locks. Monitor the upload and download rates of your peers Another useful pane is "Stats". It is made available to monitor the data transfer rate of all the peers connected to the server, as well as list and display all the global, remote, current or anonymous connections. The app also lets you control the volume of data your peers are allowed to transfer or receive. The "Command" pane can be used to create FTP upload and download commands. You can easily configure the other functions like log file monitoring, FTP data encryption and compression, and use the entire Windows system as a block device to transfer files to and from the server. The "System" pane is a convenient place to monitor the FTP servers. You can use the system to perform necessary tasks, such as creating a server, a user, view the corresponding entries, or assign certain permissions to a user.
